Nepal is a small landlocked country nestling in the Himalayas. It is the world's only Hindu kingdom, though the population also consists of Buddhists. Nepal is the site of the world famous Mount Everest, the highest mountain in the world. It is a favorite destination for trekkers and mountaineers. For devotees all over the world, Nepal is also the birthplace of Lord Buddha, and at the town of Lumbini, you can see many Buddhist temples built in architectural styles ranging from Thai to Japanese. Visit the magnificent Himalayan peaks, go trekking through the invigorating mountain trails and find peace and solace at the many Hindu temples and Buddhist stupas dotting all towns and villages of Nepal. The tribal population of the mountains will welcome you with dances and songs, and feel yourself one with nature near the many hidden pools and waterfalls on the hill sides.

How to Reach

Katmandu, the capital, is well connected to the major capitals of the world through regular air services. Many private as well as government carriers like Royal Nepal airlines, Air India, Gulf Airways, Air Sahara, Autriair and Druk Air have regular flights to Nepal. The India-Nepal border has many entry and exit points for those wishing to travel by land.

Cities in Nepal

Nepal, once the Shangri La of South Asia, is now a modern country with shopping malls, concrete buildings, hospitals, restaurants and bustling cities. The Himalayas provide a picturesque backdrop to most of Nepal's cities. The three cities in Kathmandu Valley- Kathmandu, Patan and Bhaktapur are well connected to each other. The Valley also has the largest number of UN Heritage Sites in Nepal, including the Durbar Squares, the Pashupatinath temple and Bodhi Stupa. Kathmandu, the capital, is a cosmopolitan city with temples and discotheques existing side by side. Patan, on the banks of the Bagmati, has temples with traditional Newari style pagodas. Janakpur is believed to be the birthplace of Sita, consort of the Hindu deity Lord Rama. Lumbini is famed as the birthplace of the Buddha, and is the land of Buddhist stupas reflecting the architectural styles of many Asian nations. Pokhara lies at the edge of a picturesque lake and is famed for its natural beauty.
